

Teacher Support | Best Practice

How can you facilitate an open feedback culture among your staff and at the same time create more opportunities to give and receive useful tips and support? Here's an example

Peercoaching

(provided by Teach First Deutschland - Germany)

- for lesson observations
- encourage teachers in their second year to peercoach each other
- after a beginning teacher visited the lesson of his/her peer, he/she gives feedback with the help of the tools that usually tutors/mentors use
- the beginning teacher later has another coaching session with his/her actual tutor/mentor, during which he/she talks about the experience of being feedbacked by a peer
- strengthens the ability of teachers to give and ask for transformative feedback
